Reported harm, participation barriers and relevant journal examples

Reported effects

The unresolved access request and complaint handling has contributed to distress, reduced concentration and strain on my wellbeing. Repeated follow-up and reconnecting correspondence has required time and effort. Without the requested information, it is harder to check DWP's records and identify whether correction is needed.

The current pace of messages and contact attempts is affecting my wellbeing and concentration. At present I need some space to process substantive messages accurately and do not feel comfortable discussing the Claim Review by phone. Please keep material communication in my journal wherever reasonably practicable.

Repeatedly reconnecting requests, explanations and corrections across teams has affected my wellbeing and concentration, as recorded in my journal.

The continuing absence of a clear current position has increased my uncertainty and distress. I do not currently feel adequately assured about the ownership, handling and correction route for this process.

I remain engaged and am asking for a clear human response so that I can understand the current state and act accordingly.

The wider Claim Review and coordination difficulties also contributed to the strain described here. The unresolved access matter made it harder to understand and check the records. I have not identified an actual payment loss attributable to the SAR handling.

Unresolved access and routing

No acknowledgements have been made. The journal does not show a written acknowledgement, reference number, request for identification or clarification, extension notice or substantive response.

This message is a follow-up and complaint about the handling of the existing request. It is not a new Subject Access Request and should not reset or replace the original request date or scope.

2. FOR DWP RIGHT OF ACCESS / SUBJECT ACCESS REQUEST TEAM (17 JULY 2026)

Please confirm receipt and routing of my original SAR, its reference, any lawful adjustment or notice affecting the response period, what records have been searched, and when the original request will be completed without restarting its date or scope.

I asked for the receipt date, responsible team, reference and completion of my original request. Without a clear answer, I could not check the information held about me or identify who was resolving the access matter. The repeated requests added to the administrative burden described above.

Earlier vulnerability and housing context

Since 14 May 2026, I have moved into supported accommodation in Birmingham. A Housing Benefit claim has been submitted to Birmingham City Council for the accommodation costs, and I am waiting for the Customer Reference Number.

At present, I am dealing with bereavement. I have no available funds. I recently exited 262 days of homelessness. My housing position is still being resolved. I am also waiting for documentation. I am waiting for my current position to be aligned with the previous local authority in Ipswich, where homeless relief duty had previously been accepted.

I entered supported accommodation on 14 May 2026 after 262 days of homelessness. Those circumstances preceded the SAR and explain my vulnerability and the importance of stable administration.

Participation and escalation

I have not been given a reference or clear contact responsible for resolving the SAR and August complaint in the correspondence through 10 October. This has made it difficult to track them, escalate concerns and understand what happens next.

Access to my personal data would help me check accuracy, understand what information is being used, participate in related processes and protect my position.
